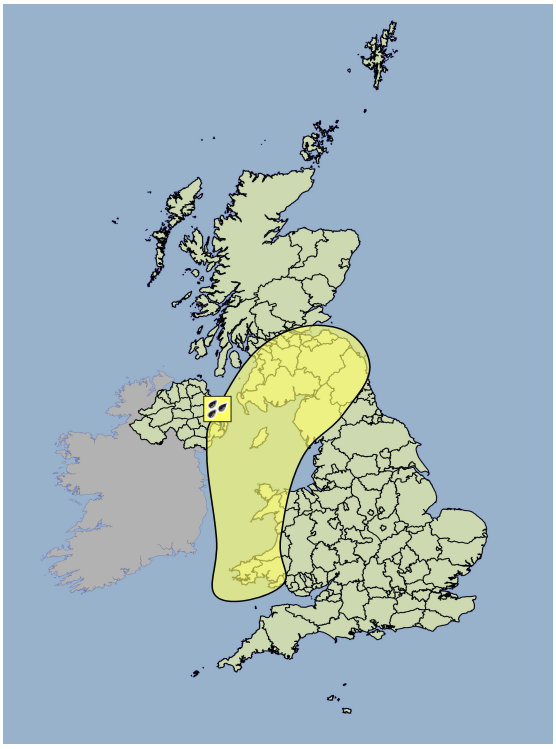
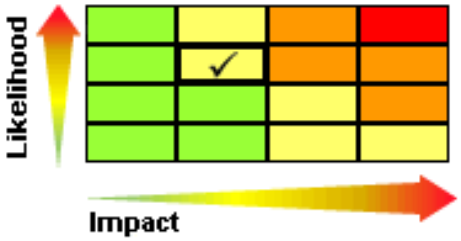
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A slow moving active cold front will be reinforced as a shallow wave runs northeastwards overnight Friday into Saturday. This will lead to some heavy and persistent rainfall, with 20 to 40 mm possibly quite widely across the warning area, while a few locations may see in excess of 60 mm, much of this falling within a few hours Despite the recent dry conditions, this may lead to surface water flooding.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 15:00 on Fri, 03rd Oct 2014 until 09:00 on Sat, 04th Oct 2014

A band of heavy rain will affect parts of the southern half of Scotland, the southeast corner of Northern Ireland, and later parts of northern England, north and west Wales, before clearing away to the southeast during Saturday morning. The exact location of the heaviest rain remains somewhat uncertain, with subsequent revisions to the area quite likely.

The public should be aware of the potential for some localised impacts to travel due to surface water flooding.
